Deadline to Apply to Nursing Program Approaching

The last day to apply to the bachelor of science in nursing program, offered through The University of Texas at Tyler Longview University Center is September 15. Opportunities are available for students who are considering becoming a nurse or going back to school to earn their bachelor's degree (RN to BSN). Interested students must apply soon in order to be ready to begin the spring 2015 semester.

"Our BSN program provides additional education not typically found in a two-year degree program," said Michelle Livingston, RN, BSN, pre-nursing advisor. "In addition to the traditional science and anatomy courses, students also complete classes in leadership and management. The result is a graduate who is well-rounded and more marketable. Students who complete the program are being sought after across the state of Texas and the nation."

Prospective students should contact Livingston at 903.663.8103 or by email at mlivingston@uttyler.edu to schedule an appointment. Prospective students will learn about specific program requirements and receive assistance with the registration process. Additional information about nursing, public administration, technology, and criminal justice courses is also available online at uttyler.edu/luc or by calling 903.663.8100.
