Course Description

A comparative and philosophical introduction to the religions of the world including but not limited to Judaism, Christianity, Islam, Hinduism, and Buddhism

Learning Outcomes

- Students will demonstrate their comprehension of the basic tenants of major world religions through examinations.
 - Students will identify and analyze key persons and events in world religions through their development and composition of a research paper.
 - Students will assess the value of historical knowledge for world religions through a comprehensive final examination essay.

Required Text

- Esposito, John L., Darrell J. Fasching, and Todd T. Lewis. World Religions Today. 6th ed. New York: Oxford Press, 2017.

Course Policies

- This course will be offered online, which means students will not be required to come to a brick and mortar classroom on a weekly basis; nevertheless, regular “attendance” is required. Each student is required to visit the course Canvas site on a weekly basis to complete his/her assignments. Each week a student fails to visit the site and complete the assignments will result in a 5-point deduction in the student’s final attendance grade, which comprises 10% of the overall course grade.
 - Late work will not be accepted, except in the case of highly unusual and/or tragic circumstances. If a student is unable to turn in an assignment by its due date, he/she should consult with the professor as soon as possible to discuss special arrangements.

Assessment

1. During the first week of the course, students will read the syllabus and complete the Syllabus Quiz posted to our Canvas site.
2. Students will take two exams throughout the course of the semester, a mid-term and a final. For each exam, students will be asked to recall key events, persons, and ideas from their readings and class lectures. YOU MAY NOT CONSULT YOUR NOTES WHILE TAKING THE EXAMS. Both exams will consist of multiple choice, true false, and essay questions, and will be due no later than the following dates:

Posted March 18; Due March 20
Posted April 27; Due April 29

Mid Term Examination
Final Examination

3. Students will submit Reading Response Essays on a weekly basis. These 250-word essays should both summarize the reading assignment for that week and also provide questions or reflections that arise from the reading. Students should work to balance their summary and reflection. Reading Response Essays are due no later than Friday at 5:00 p.m. (CST) of each week.
4. Toward the beginning of the semester, students will choose an important person or event from any world religion, which will serve as the basis for a 15-20 slide PowerPoint Presentation. Each slide should include detailed notes in the “note section.” Students should create the slide show as if they are preparing to introduce the topic to a college level class. Students should turn in these projects no later than Friday, April 17.
