Course Description
Strategic HRD is a research based course focused on the linkages between competitive strategy and HR issues. Topics include a review of relevant strategic theories, examining how HRD issues integrate with and are informed by these theories, exploring alternative patterns of interdependence among HR and strategic variables, and articulating and testing causal theory that integrates strategic and HR constructs to explain firm level outcomes.

Learning Outcomes
At successful completion of this course students will have demonstrated the ability to:

1. Ask an interesting question, and make it theoretically interesting;
2. Develop a causal model that provides a theoretical answer to the interesting question;
3. Articulate a theoretical statement that provides the causal logic specified in the model;
4. Design a large-scale, multi-organizational quantitative data collection strategy using both survey data and archival performance data to test the theory;
5. Articulate a detailed analysis strategy that accurately tests the logic of your theory; and
6. Identify and discuss the most important boundary conditions of the theory and limitations to the testing approach.

These skills will be demonstrate within the context of Strategic HRD/M.

ASSIGNMENTS

Due 8:00 a.m. June 2, 2018
1. 10% Frame the Question – 3 pages. See learning outcome 1.

Due 8:00 a.m. June 30, 2018
2. 10% Theory Development. See learning outcomes 2 & 3.
   i. Draw a causal model – 1 page
   ii. Articulate the causal logic and formulate hypotheses – 8 pages
Due 8:00 a.m. August 4, 2018

3. 10% Theory Testing. See learning outcomes 4 & 5.
   i. Data Collection – 5 pages
   ii. Data Analysis – 3 pages

Due 8:00 a.m. August 4, 2018

4. 10% Boundary Condition and Control Variables – 2 pages. See learning outcome 6.
5. 20% Class Contribution (okay, this won’t be complete until the end of the session, so stay awake!)

Due 5:00 p.m. August 10, 2018

6. 50% Final Paper – This needs to be a single, well written paper. Do not merely patch the assignments together into a single document.
   1. Pull all the pieces together, add a title page, abstract, and reference section.
   2. Try to keep it below 30 pages inclusive, probably around 25 pages of text.

Assignment Grading Rubric

• 50% -- Minimum effort; poorly done
• 75% -- Effort apparent, but logic not well executed and not well written
• 85% -- Good effort, on target with evidence of deep thought and sound presentation
• 95% -- Done well and well done.

Course Grades

Course grades will be assigned on a holistic basis and include a healthy dose of my professional judgement, but generally will be based on the weights suggested for the assignments and follow a traditional 90/80/70 scale. I reserve the right to make adjustments as is appropriate for a doctoral seminar.

DETAILED READING LIST

Doty Pontificates: As the semester progresses I will be developing some short video introductions for some/many/all of the learning outcomes and topics in the syllabus. I will post these in Canvas as I get them developed. These introductions are not intended to replace or even supplement the reading materials, but rather are intended to provide some framing for the topics and, hopefully, some guidance on the learning objectives and assignments.
