PAYROLL DEDUCTION

When an employee receives a paycheck, certain deductions will have been made. Several of the deductions are required, while others are made only at the employee’s request. Among the required deductions are Federal Income Tax, Social Security, and a retirement contribution. The retirement contribution is explained in more detail in the Employee Benefits section of this Handbook. The Employee Benefits section will also explain insurance and other programs that result in payroll deductions made only at your request. Employees may elect to have payroll deductions to The State Employee Charitable Campaign, or for the purchase of U.S. Savings Bonds. Additional information is available in Human Resources.

Return to the Table of Contents