

6.7.3 Dissertation (For PhD only)

The dissertation is a culmination of the student's program of research while enrolled in the doctoral program at The University of Texas at Tyler. The dissertation process at The University of Texas at Tyler School of Nursing is a hybrid between the traditional U.S. model, which emphasizes beginning a major research project upon completion of coursework, and the European model, which places emphasis on publication and a discourse of the program of research at the end of study. Specific guidelines for dissertation are provided on the PhD learning management site: PhrD Cafe
